

Did God Use Prince's Death to Warn Catholics?

Three days ago our Lord took the pop star, Prince, and there was a great significance to that. Although the false prophets all over YouTube understand there is a significance, they don't know what that significance is. I'm the only one who has explained to you that he died on the second anniversary of the date when Pope Francis first took the 'daily sacrifice away from the prince' and that occurred when he telephoned a woman in Argentina and said that she could receive communion in the Roman Catholic Church, even though she was divorced and civilly remarried and, of course, that violates two thousand years of Church teaching. It violates what our Lord said: 'do not give that which is holy to the dogs'. It violates what Saint Paul taught: 'anyone who eats and drinks the body and blood of our Lord unworthily is guilty of the body and blood of our Lord'.

And all this is due to an exhortation from Pope Francis a few days before Prince died where he allows divorced and remarried Catholics to receive Communion. Here's the headline from LifeSiteNews, this was Wednesday, April 20th: 'Exhortation allows Communion for divorced and remarried on a case-by-case basis claim three German bishops'. In other words, that would be as if you retranslated scripture so that Jesus says 'do not give that which is holy to the dogs except on a case-by-case basis'. These bishops are perverting the Gospel and, of course, they are taking their lead from the False Prophet, Pope Francis.

Let me read a few sentences from this article: 'Pope Francis' apostolic exhortation, Amoris Laetitia, permits divorced and civilly remarried Catholics to access the sacraments on a case-by-case basis three German Bishops claim. Cardinal Reinhard Marx, Archbishop Dr Heiner Koch and Bishop Franz-Josef Bode all cited footnote 351 (keep track of that number) the controversial footnote that critics worry undermines Church teaching by, in certain cases, allowing Holy Communion for those in objectively sinful situations.' In other words, as Saint Paul said, 'those who eat and drink the body and the blood of our Lord unworthily are guilty of the body and the blood of our Lord' (except in certain situations). These people don't have a right to add or subtract from the Gospel.

Amoris Laetitia: The Infamous Footnote 351

Published 11 April AD 2016

<sup>351</sup> In certain cases, this can include the help of the sacraments. Hence, “I want to remind priests that the confessional must not be a torture chamber, but rather an encounter with the Lord’s mercy” (Apostolic Exhortation Evangelii Gaudium [24 November 2013], 44: AAS 105 [2013], 1038). I would also point out that the Eucharist “is not a prize for the perfect, but a powerful medicine and nourishment for the weak” (ibid., 47: 1039).

And I wanted to explain about footnote 351. Satan does everything backwards. 351 is the opposite of Mary's Rosary number, 153. That is not accidental, people. It is Satan who is promoting this controversial footnote and would you believe, Pope Francis says he doesn't remember adding that footnote? Here's the headline; this is also from LifeSiteNews. Let me just read a little bit of what it says here. This is unbelievable! 'It was the footnote heard round the world, footnote 351 to be precise, the dynamite, or so it seemed to some, quietly buried deep in Pope Francis' recent apostolic exhortation, Amoris Laetitia'. Well, you know it's interesting, maybe he doesn't remember. People who are possessed by Satan often do not remember what they do. It is Satan who acts through the person. If indeed Pope Francis is the False Prophet, it was Satan himself who wrote that footnote, that evil footnote which goes against the Gospel.

Now, I want to read a few more of the messages by subscribers have sent to me and I'm asking you today, this weekend, let me know if any of your priests or bishops have commented on Amoris Laetitia or specifically, on this footnote which allows divorced and remarried Catholics to receive Communion against every rule the church has ever taught. Here's what Stephen Langley wrote: 'I asked two of the priests here at our parish in Japan who told me surely there will be a process for the divorced and remarried to go through and that it will take time for this change to reach Japan. He said they have not met with the bishop yet.' So, Stephen please keep me up to date. I will be interested to know what your priests ultimately decide after they hear from their bishop.

Here's a message from Menin Charles Gomes: 'My parish priest went on vacation to the Vatican. The priest covering said he will interview the divorcee prior to giving them Holy Communion and it didn't strike me then as to how would he know if they came up for Communion unannounced and, more importantly, if they went ahead and got divorced after the Pope made that most blasphemous change. At any rate, this young and otherwise truly holy priest did not understand what's really going on, in my opinion.' I agree with you Menin, I don't think he knows, I think he will soon, I hope, find out. 'It's a deception all the way, anyway, as you have said, Mister Tapley, passing the buck to let the local priests perform the abomination'. It sounds to me as if what the bishops are going to likely do is to let priests grant annulments. Of course, this is crazy! If this is true, why was Henry the Eighth excommunicated? Thomas Cranmer would be more than happy to give him an annulment. In Francis' new church, the One World Religion, Henry VIII would feel right at home. And as I have said all along, the One World Religion, even though it will be headquartered in the Vatican, even though it will be headed by a so-called Pope, will be a Protestant One World Religion.

Now, here is what Ulphil 08 wrote: 'Here is what my Pastor wrote to me, Pope Francis does not state that divorced and civilly remarried Catholics can now return to receiving Communion'. Well, maybe he hasn't read footnote 351. 'What he does say is that bishops and priests need to be sensitive and pastoral as they attempt to help people in this situation.' Well, I agree with that. 'As you stated in your email, for a divorced and remarried Catholic to be to be able to receive Communion they need an annulment from the Church.' I hope he is not living in the past. That's always the way it used to be; that's the way, of course, it should be. 'At Saint Anthony's we will follow the teaching of the Church, especially being pastorally sensitive to divorced and remarried Catholics.'

Here is my answer to Ulphil08: 'Well it does not sound too bad to me. He repeats Church teaching about needing an annulment. If his bishop starts to allow communion to the divorced and remarried it will be interesting to see if your priest reneges on his principles in order to keep his job.'

I have a nephew who's a priest in this diocese and I sure hope that he upholds the principles which he understands. And now our Bishop, Bishop Cunningham, has stated that the Church has not changed as far as not allowing divorced and remarried to receive communion. But now, what is he doing behind our backs? Is he going to allow priests to grant annulments? And this is all, of course, very serious and I believe that's all I have for today.

I'm going to continue covering this because Bible prophecy has been fulfilled. The Abomination of Desolation has been introduced into the Church by the False Prophet, Pope Francis. He has taken the 'daily sacrifice away from the prince'. Not everyone understands this, I think most Catholics soon will understand it. And people watching YouTube: don't listen to the false prophets. They understand that this is significant, that Prince died three days ago, but they don't understand why, however, Almighty God is going to keep having these things occur until everyone wakes up. This is no small matter to have Daniel's prophecy fulfilled in our lifetime, in our sight. We are experiencing it right now. So, all I can say is please wake up soon. This is extremely important. It's a life-and-death situation. The life was taken away from the Prince and that was a perfect reflection of what Daniel prophesies about the daily sacrifice taken away from THE Prince.
