

Bible Prophecy in Cute Puppy Commercial

Well, you wouldn't believe how much criticism I am taking because I compared that cute, little puppy, in the Budweiser commercial, to the Antichrist. And, I want to respond to a particular article on this program, but first, I want to comment on that bald eagle you see to my right which is feeding on a deer carcass on the Forestport pond; I took that video earlier this morning.

Some people say I should not use a green screen but I am doing this speaking part of the video in my studio, and I combined the two shots through the green screen.

And, another reason I wanted to show you the bald eagle feeding on that carcass is because some people say that Matthew, chapter 24, verse 28 should read 'where the carcass is the vultures are gathered together,' but that is incorrect. The correct translation is 'where the body is the eagles are gathered together.' And you must say 'body' and you must say 'eagles' because that particular passage also has an End Times interpretation. In the Near Time, it did refer to dead bodies and it did refer to vultures, but in the End Times, it refers to Jesus; He is the 'Body' and the 'eagles' he gathers together are his followers at the Battle of Armageddon.

And some people complained to me that it can't be 'eagles' because eagles don't eat carrion, and therefore you couldn't say eagles for both interpretations, the Near Time interpretation and the End Times interpretation. But this video, which I shot earlier this morning, proves to you that eagles, including American Bald eagle s, do indeed eat carrion.

And now, I want to read excerpts from this article by Stan Diel, and I'll put the link below, and this is called: 'Self-Described End Times

Prophet Who Saw Phalli at Denver Airport Says Budweiser Puppy is Sign of the Antichrist.' William Tapley, the Evangelist, who gained fame when he said public works of art in the Denver Airport included hidden, phallic symbols,' yes they do, Stan, not just male symbols but female symbols also, hidden, sexual images, 'now sees evil in a puppy that appeared in a Super Bowl commercial. In a video posted to YouTube on Friday, Tapley says the Budweiser commercial, in which a Labrador Retriever puppy is born among Clydesdale horses, and keeps running away from adopted human parents to rejoin them is evidence of the nearing of the End Times.'

Absolutely, Stan. 'It is talking about the arrival of the Antichrist, Tapley said in his video.' Now, I have refined my analysis a little bit since then, Stanley. I believe the puppy is a better symbol for the False Prophet. 'In the commercial called 'Puppy Love' which won USA Today's Super Bowl ad contest,' well that's interesting, USA Today, I think likes sentimentality. Personally, I like that commercial called, 'Doberhuahua'; I thought that was much funnier. In any event, 'the puppy is born at a ranch identified as Warm Springs, that is code for Lake of Fire,' and that is the truth, Stan. 'Tapley said, that's where our puppy dog comes from.' Well, the puppy dog actually goes to the 'Lake of Fire' and that coincides with Bible prophecy. 'Tapley sees symbolism throughout the commercial saying that four of the Budweiser Clydesdale horses represent the beasts of the Apocalypse.'

Well, I think a little better would be to say that the four horses symbolize the Four Horses of the Apocalypse. And now, Stan goes on to refer back to my videos made several years ago about the Satanic prophecy in those Denver murals. 'Tapley made headlines when he complained that public art, architecture and the layout at Denver International Airport included hidden phallic symbols,' as I said, also female symbols. 'Airport officials dismissed the complaint as ludicrous.'

Well, I have never seen any official statement from the Denver Airport officials about my analysis of their murals and I doubt if they will. I don't think they want to stick their neck out because they know I'm right. 'In an interview broadcast by Stephen Colbert,' now listen to this, 'Tapley said that he is unusually attuned to phallic symbols, enabling him to see them where others may overlook them. It's a gift from the Holy Spirit, he said.' Well, Stan, you have to understand, Stephen Colbert is not a man of integrity. Yes, Stephen Colbert did send a crew up here to Forestport to interview me for about an hour at my home, but they cut and spliced that interview to make me sound ridiculous. I never said that my interpretation of the Denver Airport is a gift from the Holy Spirit. They asked me about Bible prophecy and I said that my interpretation of prophecy from God is a gift from the Holy Spirit.

So, I thought I would explain maybe, three different kinds of prophecy that I have been explaining here on YouTube. First of all, a Co-Prophet completes the prophecies of Daniel, Esther, even our Lord in the Olivet Discourse. Those prophecies come from the Holy Spirit and do require two people to explain them. It's like a male and a female producing a child. A Prophet and a Co-Prophet produces End Times prophecy. You need both. Now, sometimes God works through pagan people, for example, King Nebuchadnezzar, and that is the same way with the 'Gangnam Style' prophecies or the prophecies in this puppy dog commercial by Budweiser. They are very popular prophecies. They are usually up lifting. They don't have, for the most part, hidden sexual imagery.

By contrast, those murals at the Denver Airport by Leo Tanguma and others, and this latest iPad commercial, contain prophecies from Satan through his minions in the Illuminati. They almost always contain hidden, sexual images. They show death and destruction. They are prophecies of false flag events. And, maybe Stephen Colbert is right to splice up my interview because you do need a Co-Prophet to understand those prophecies also. And, if you watch, oh, videos by Katy Perry or Miley Cyrus or Madonna, they also contain images from the Illuminati, but those are not prophetic as much as they are simply celebrations of debauchery.

And so, in conclusion, if you want to understand the hidden messages in that puppy dog commercial from Budweiser or even from our Lord Himself in Matthew 24 about the 'body' and the 'eagles', as epitomized by that eagle behind me, then you have to follow the co-prophecies on my YouTube channel. And, you should go to my new thirdeaglemedia.com website if you want to unseal the prophecies of Daniel. As I have said many times, you cannot understand Daniel as he is printed in your Bibles because those prophecies are sealed up. You need to go to my channel, you need to download those PDF files, you need to rearrange the chapters and the verses of Daniel's great vision chapters if you want to understand his prophecies of these End Times.
